Patrimonii sui Reliquiae.

*Being the Cream of his Paintings.
To be Sold by Auction in Covent-Garden.*

At Mr. _____ in Easter Week.

HAVING had 20 Years ago a compleat Collection of all the Old rare Classiq Prints in the highest Perfection, also all the Works of all the Modern Masters compleat, which cost me above a 1000 Pound, no Body of the Vertuosos appeared, giving Credit to Tempest, who whisper'd that they were all Copies, not worth 50 Pound. So he says again of my Paintings, which he never saw. Now whereas Honesti & Honorati have found by Experience, - that those Sels interested Sharpers are Lyars by Profession, I thought it not unseasonable now to venture my Pictures. No Monopolites to be admitted to the Sight.

Setling me at Fulham 1710. The Rattel Snake gives Notice to Briareo, that I wasted 2000 Pound in Tayes, that I was outwitted out of the Tayes. That there was now only left my Pictures. That he cou'd be Master of the same, if he ordered his Honsman to aus Lows some Bitches upon me. He in hopes of prey, repeted all the Villany in 15 Months time, which a dozen of Picaröens had done in 15 Years together. He mislay'd me to a Lady, who show'd me her Ring. He caused his Cousin to come in our Company, who show'd his Golden Watch. Another time he seduced me into the Club. There he himself pulled 3 Handfuls of Broad Pieces and Guineas out of his Pocket. I immediately went away, knowing Perjury to be more courrant Money, than Broad-Pieces. If I present to him Two Pictures, worth 35 Pound. He will be my Friend, and keep Company with me, and leave me also a Legacy, having no Children. He hearing that that I scorn'd the Company of a Fellow, who is no Scholar or Vertuoso, found out a more Compendious way to get them surer and cheaper. A Painter told me that he was gone to London to consult with a Chymist to get my Pictures. In 3 Months I was three times poisoned. After he has done some Villany against me enitescit pulchrior multo. Vultuosus gives me a visit, and pities my Condition, and asks me if I should not leave all to my Wife? (The Song of the Borts of pray,) I have no Wife. So I perceived that my days were shortened on purposed to get my Collection of an Ignorand. Now he invites me to Dinner adding. That he will leave a Gentlewoman alone with me, all wont do silly Briaree. It is more easier to Conquer Dunkirk, then to get a good Picture. They have given me 100 times at Fulham Powders and Poison to force me to sell my Books, Pictures, to part of my Estate to my House-Keeper. When the Germans comes they shall correct those Base, Black, execrable Torturers, else they cannot be more secure than King Charles the II, and the Duke of Gloster. The Lord induce Her Majesty to order the Parliament provide Antidotes against those Jesuitical Powders, a Rax against those Murtherers.

THE DEVIL UPON TWO CRUTCHES

Chear ! Chear !

Hier.

Carry me to Hell.

I do not know my L. where Hell is. But if it may please your L. I carry you to the Devil.

Go unto the Devil Tavern.

What upon Crutches ?

I am very Old, if it may please your L.

No Old Devil can please me. Have you no younger Devils in Hell ?

Yes, Long Brown, who carries little Davits upon his Shoulders:

What is become of little Gibson ?

He goes upon Steilds, in Purgatory, making great long strides to Mr. Vande Velde, to tell him the Fortune of his Weduwe.

I know a Gentleman, who has the best Sea pieces, and will part with the same.

I wonder that that Gentleman parts with all his Fine Collections.

Have you never read the Letter of Perin del Vago ?

Pray tell me the Intention of that Pamphlet.

Mr.

Mr. H. B. Having laid out 2000 Pound in Books, Prints, Pictures, Meddals, Rarities, his House-Keeper was assaulted and Debauched by a Hungry Wolf, to be maintain'd by her with the ruine of her Master. He endeavours to cut his Throat at Oxford to have his Library. Now he breaks all his Letters open, and instigates the Dutch Parson to send him to Holland, to get his Books again. Bull, hired be the Draconiers, came over to Transport the Dr. to plunder his Goods. To this purpose Bull told to the late Lord B. That the Doctor was an Enemy of King James That Myl. know'd that King Charles the Second should not Recover. That Myl. know'd before of the Assassination of K. W. That the Dr. also had revail'd his Designs to Conquer the Dutch Indien, which the Jacky Knave only had invented to draw Customers ro his House. My Lord sends for the Doctor and ordered his Valet de Chambre to give him a Glas of Wine. The Doctor knowing that Laroen had got a Glas of Wine by the same order, which made him Spew a whole Week Blew, the Steam of Arsenick, did not Drink it. My L. Very uneasy corrupt all the Doctors Companions, to be informed by them, if the Dr. had perceived the intention of that Potion. The rest shall be known after the Doctors Death,

Death, not doubting but the good ones will erect a Sepulchal Monument to his Memory.

For all the Damage done through Sly-Malice against him, by Ochus, Typhon, Python, Pethen, Tophan Oggan, and other Tempestales.

The Plague Rot them all.

I wonder they shou'd persecute the Doctor, who never did any thing against K. J. and who uses to say that K. J. was a generous Gentlemen, only that he kept bad Company, who Favoured the Civil Religion.

At Doctor non favet civili fraudi Justin. XVI, qua sublatus Alexander M. & Bonus Carolus.

Forbear. Try Successors being determinated, the Loyal Loiolys may go hund now Butler flys. what have you for Supper?

I have at the Spit a Rattel Sneak and a Porkupin. Bring up some of the Rattle-Sneak.

That Rattle Sneak looks scabby and masely.

He was possessed with an Evil Spirit his Father Devil in Bethlehem.

Hem! Faites an un Ragou avec de Moutarde & de champions de Tiburne.

Be silent else they will continue to piss in your Drink.

Truly my Ale was Prikt last Night.
